

---

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

61 A communication apparatus capable of transmitting and receiving information via a digital interface includes a first communication unit, corresponding to a first communication system, and a second communication unit, corresponding to a second communication system different from the first communication system. The first communication unit receives first command data for controlling a predetermined function and the second communication unit receives second command data for controlling a same predetermined function as the first command data.

---